

I want to comment that the proposal should not supersede existing state laws. Indiana's law has given my family peace over the last year like we've never experienced. We received one telemarketer call the last year as opposed to the usual 3 per week. My opinion is that telemarketing is an invasion of privacy. Telemarketing does not give the consumer a choice to be interrupted as other media does. Given the power, the states can handle this issue themselves.